DAVID J. GRIBIN

HAMPTONDELSEV@JUNO.COM

He's the "Can Do" Man of Hampton Delivery Services

Now in its second full season of servicing the East End of Long Island, Hampton Delivery Services (HDS) has officially expanded from a delivery service (packages, mail, purchases, legal documents, etc.) to a full blown support service for a year round and resort community. What started as an answer to the problem of no local street delivery of mail in the Bridgehampton area soon became a wide ranging, multi-item delivery service and now offers many other services as well - hence the new "s" at the end of SERVICE in the name. Founder and still #1 company man, David J. Gribin has found that being willing to take on whatever task is at hand has helped him begin to establish the kind of reputation he wants - that of a "can do" guy.

David attributes his tendency to never say "can't" to the years he spent rebuilding his life after his accident.

"Saying I can't could have meant sitting in a wheelchair the rest of my life" says the owner of Hampton Delivery Services, "or possibly worse than that. I learned you've gotta buckle down and do it."

Getting the job done is just what David does all over the Hamptons. Weather it's delivering goodie bags full of Corcoran Group hats, pens and other treats to Guild Hall and the Hampton Classic, transporting a dog from Connecticut to Sag Harbor for training, photographing properties for local realtors, organizing a guest house and storage area for a local landlord or braving the July 4th traffic to drive customers to JFK, David Gribin is getting the job done. He's taken care of expensive, one of a kind sports cars for owners who want their "weekend vehicles" clean, gassed up and ready to go for Friday night and he's delivered sensitive legal documents to Manhattan with his same day service special guarantee.

One of David's regular customers, Jazz Pianist Judy Carmichael, likes to find things to hire him for. "His positive attitude and cheerful nature always put me in a good mood" relates Carmichael, "Just about the only thing I wouldn't ask him to do is move my 9' Steinway", she laughs "only an expert piano mover should do that - and I'd really hate to see David have to disappoint a customer, I think it would just about kill him." Smiling at Carmichael's comment, David concedes maybe he can't do it all but he's finding out he can do quite a bit - and yes, always with a smile. "Hey, I'm up and about, living my life, building my business, getting to know nice people, it feels good to work hard for them — besides, I just think what the alternative could have been, maybe that's why I find it easy to smile."

David has been a "can do" guy for most of his life, a trait that may have just saved his life. After being involved in an unfortunate horseback riding accident at the age of 21 David ended up in a month long coma. Upon regaining consciousness he found out just how serious his injuries were and that he faced a long battle towards physical rehabilitation. Going at it with a determination to succeed he now applies to his new business. David not only came back from the brink but ended up running in the New York City Marathon 3 times. David also served on a congressional committee, co-authoring a presidential report on mainstreaming people with disabilities.
